E E. COOPER.

The lines constitute an inch.

The man who edits the Colored American is Jessie Lawson, a clerk in the Interior Department; the man who is responsible for the publication of that paper is E. E. Cooper, a new adventurer from the West, who came organized a stock company which has not as yet declared any dividends.

Mr. Cooper came to this city to run a democratic journal, and since his says. stay here he has been working both democrats and republicans. He has to them that it is a republican paper, democrats. ## A NEGRO JUDGE.

There is no reason that can be offered which will prevent the present or the next administration from appointing a colored lawyer one of the judges of the police court.

The negro is entitled to representation on the bench and also in the district attorney's office.

There are hundreds of colored lawyers fully competent and able to be appointed on the bench in the District of Columbia. President Cleveland would

LAWYER CHASE REBUKED.

JUDGE KIMBALL WILL NOT AL-LOW NO BROWBEATING IN HIS COURT.

[From the Daily Post.]

Calvin Chase, the colored lawyer, has a very pleasant but rather too sonorous a voice for a courtroom. Yeste day he acted as attorney for an old colored man, Benjamin Wallace, who was accused of using profane language to an aged market woman because she refused to let him "lead her horse to water." J. E. Burns, the market master, caused his arrest, and Officer Cooney took him before Judge Kimball When Mr. Burns was testifying Lawyer Chase began to question him. The witness took offense at the lawyer's manner and was answering af er his own way

"The lawyer and witness must treat each other with respect, and I shall see that witnesses are not talked down hereafter. Go on with the case" After which there was no more trouble. Wallace got off with $10 fine.

When the attorney for the colored man asked the white man a question, he turned to him and said that "I am talking to you, sir," to which the court took no exception, but as scon as the colored attorney turned to the white man and asked him a question in a very sharp manner, in the same manner he replied to the colored attorney, the court took exceptions.

Some judges are always so afraid that the colored attorney will not respect the dignity of the court that they are forever reminded of it, especially is this the characteristic of Republican judges appointed by the last administration.

What is greatly needed at this time is the right to appeal from the police court.
